urchin softlight

urchin softlight invites playful interaction. Using flexible honeycomb geometry, urchin expands and morphs into myriad shapes as you manipulate it with your hands. Its elastic movement and shifting form are akin to that of a sea creature, giving the luminary its unique name. Adjusting urchin's form also adjusts the intensity, direction and quality of light—a beautiful, tactile way to sculpt light within a space.

The shade is made from a tear- and water-resistant, non-woven polyethylene textile that is antistatic so as to not attract dust. The textile shades are illuminated from within by energy efficient 90+ CRI LEDs available in warm white (2700K) or neutral white (4000K) colour temperatures.

Design by Stephanie Forsythe + Todd MacAllen rare earth magnets set into the final layer of textile form a hidden seam for the shade to fasten to itself.

urchin's asymmetrical sides create two distinct families of forms. Flipping the flat side out turns the shade into a cone or cylinder, while the curved side fashions more rounded, organic shapes.

the shades are made from a tear- and water-resistant non-woven polyethylene textile that possesses the delicate look of Japanese washi.

a custom dimmer featuring one-button functionality cycles urchin's luminosity from off to full brightness and back.
